ONS boss praises Faroese

This will be it this time you will succeed in finding oil or gas, says a smiling ONS boss, when he paid the Faroe stand a visit at ONS in Stavanger. Joint town friends He has been the town mayor of Stavanger over several periods. Now he is the CEO for ONS and he has all good reasons to be very satisfied. This years attendance has broken all records, with over 60.000 visitors visiting the app. 1300 stands, including the Faroe stand. The Faroes hold a special place in the heart of Mr Leif Johan Sevland. Stavanger and Torshavn have been friendly towns for a very long time and as the Mayor of Stavanger, he has been closely involved with both Tórshavn and the Faroes. Therefore it was a very upbeat and positive Mr Sevland who visited the Faroe stand, just prior to the closing of the exhibition doors last Friday. He says he is very proud of the Faroe participation - -I am quite surprised by the Faroe participation here at ONS. You have participated for a long time now. You have been steadily working on the long-term perspective and you know very well how to build networks and visit places, which have been in a similar predicament to your own. You are in the process of building up an industry in this area and that is good. The Faroes are well prepared for a future oil industry, Mr Sevland tells oljan.fo. Hopefully you will succeed in making a discovery this time, so you can participate in ONS next time as a true oil province, Mr Sevland concluded.
